This programme offers traditional musicians ages 16-24, an exciting and unique music and leadership programme opportunity that begins in October 2019 and ends no later than March 2020. The programme is available to one female and one male youth from each county with no cost for the participants.

For their involvement and effort, participants will also earn a Certification in Diversity and Good Relations Training - Level 1, awarded by the Open College Network. With no expiration date, this certificate would be a valuable addition to include on C.V.s and third level education or employment applications as it is well recognised by both.

The programme being delivered centres around the traditional music and culture of Ulster. It aims to enrich and enliven the tuition that young musicians are already involved in with their bands and/or tutors, by offering unique participation in performance opportunities, including at the 3rd anniversary of the highly notable Remembering Bunting Festival in Belfast – February 2020, as well as bespoke facilitated workshops/retreats and cultural activities with guest speakers. The participants will also learn and perform tunes as part of a broader ensemble made up of like musicians from other traditions from across Ulster. This ensemble will be performing under the CEOL banner, as it has been known for the past three years with established programme bands before it, and is funded by The Executive Office's Central Good Relations Programme.
